Dear friends, brothers and colleagues. I invite you to listen carefully and forward to your contacts these two videos with reports that were made to me during two successive interviews with a Mexican channel.

There I had the opportunity to present my complete position regarding peace in all its aspects and to invite Paz Arte Cultura, the International Peace Coalition and WWPO to read it.

For me, this means a kind of political, social and artistic testament. They are a little long, but I ask you to be patient and listen to them until the end. Thank you for your attention, your collaboration and your much appreciated comments, if you wish to make them.

Politics beyond national borders As a global citizen, conflict resolution, cultural bridges, democracy, environmental protection, human development, human rights, humanitarian law, international justice, migration, modern slavery, NGOs, non-violence, refugees, religious freedom, social rights, solidarity, Sustainable development, The search for peace, Track II, United Nations, Women's rights, Global law.

In today's globalized world society, borderless politics plays an increased role. Politics no longer stops at the water's edge, but must play an active role on the world stage. However, unlike politics at the national level which usually has a parliament where actors can recite their lines, the world does not have a global parliament as such. We must therefore find new and inventive ways so that global public opinion can be heard and acted upon. The United Nations (UN) General Assembly is the closest thing to a world parliament we have today.

However, all official participants are diplomats appointed by their respective states – 195 member states. Members of the UN Secretariat, members of the Secretariat of specialized UN agencies such as UNESCO and the ILO, are in the corridors or cafes giving advice.

Secretariat members from financial institutions such as the World Bank and IMF are also there to advise on costs and limits of available funds

Representatives of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in consultative status with the United Nations who can address sessions of the Economic and Social Council and the Human Rights Council cannot address the Assembly directly. general. However, they are also in cafes and can send documents to UN missions of national governments.

The "Gaza in French" site chosen best Palestinian site in a foreign language only six months after its creation Bravo to the young French-speaking people of Gaza who manage this site.

<https://www.gazaenfrancais.net/>

In April 2023, the "Gaza en Français" site (gazaenfrancais.net) was named the best Palestinian site in a foreign language by the Palestinian websites platform.

Created in September 2022 by young French-speaking people from Gaza, this free information site, freely accessible without subscription, is recognized as very enriching; it offers a new and more concrete point of view on the social, economic and cultural situation in Gaza.

This site aims to inform the French-speaking world about daily life in this confined region, and about the will of its civilian population who continue to cling to life.

It shows a multiple and varied face of Gaza, little broadcast in the media which, in general, only talk about the Gaza Strip in the event of bombings, but ignore everything about the life, creation and human wealth of Gaza. 'a living region despite the blockade and enormous economic and social difficulties.

With its 16 sections and 72 varied subsections, it has become a reference in the French-speaking world on the cultural, social and economic situation in the Gaza Strip.*

Its attendance is constantly increasing, with thousands of visitors: 35,000 visits during the first three months of 2023, an increase of 105% in six months and its visibility in search engines is increasing regularly.

In six months, the "Gaza in French" site has already published 1,500 publications, news, information, fact sheets, videos, photos, documentary films, reports and articles on the different cultural, social, economic and environmental aspects of this part of Palestine, on the creation and will of the different components of Palestinian society in the Gaza Strip, as well as on actions of solidarity with the Palestinian people in the French-speaking world.

It is a reference for the French-speaking world on this isolated Palestinian enclave: its history, its regions, its population, its education system, its culture, its economy, its institutions, the evolution of its civil society, etc.

The site is constantly improving and you can send your comments, proposals and suggestions to the motivated young people and volunteers who manage it. Young people who only ask for encouragement to continue and perfect their information work.

Bravo to the young French-speaking volunteers from Gaza for the success of this first information site in French in Gaza! Thank you to all the French-speaking people for their encouragement!

Assessment of Education for peace and ethical learning at school

This article deals with peace education based on Aristotelian virtues with children at risk. The research problem is violence in schools and the need to build peace there. The hypothesis is the possibility of peace education in risk areas. The goal is that 4th grade students can learn and practice the virtue of friendship.

The research location is a public primary school located in a risky area of the city of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The Living Peace project is the central concept of this research on education for peace. We concluded that the practice of ethics and peace education through virtue is possible if students learn to practice virtues as the basis of a culture of peace.

Learning assessment; Fundamentals of education; Ethics; Education for peace. This article discusses the relevance of peace education through virtues with school students at risk.

The virtue of friendship was chosen as the specific object of this research. Macintyre (2021), specialist in the Aristotelian perspective of the virtues, provides the philosophical foundations. The author underlines the absence of practice of virtues and the presence of emotivism in modernity.

The concept of emotivism already existed in philosophy before this philosopher, but it was taken up by him. It is the emotional attitude towards the subject that Macintyre (2021) emphasizes. She acts without ethical criteria, but guided by purely personal opinions.

The research highlighted the experience of the Living Peace project in a 4th year primary school class in a public school, located in a risk area. Interviews with the class and their families as well as reports from the intervention workshops were part of the analysis material.

Education for peace, in this research, is based on the thought of Lubich (2017), who proposes education based on love and dialogue. It is this concept that inspires the Living Peace project. This is an international project, officially launched in 2013, in Egypt, with the objective of cooperating for a culture of peace (Palma de Mallorca, 2018).

One of the educational tools used in the project is the peace dice game. It is a die on which sentences describing attitudes of peace are written. The objective is to practice listening, empathy and forgiveness.

Is it possible to talk about Peace and learn to live Peace in places where violence reigns?

It was this question that prompted us to begin research.
