President and Founder of Peace and Sport

These four words convey a powerful truth: without sport, we lose one of the most effective tools for peace. This may sound provocative, but it is meant to provoke thought. In a world where more than 460 million children live in conflict zones, we cannot afford to neglect any avenue for action. While sport alone cannot end wars or resolve deep-seated conflicts, it plays a crucial role in preventing violence and promoting reconciliation.

And these are key elements for building—and living in—peaceful communities. Sport is a universal language that transcends borders, politics, and ideologies, uniting people in ways that few other activities can. Around the world, sport has bridged divides where politics and diplomacy have failed.

It has united nations once at war, healed communities torn apart by conflict, and offered young people an alternative to violence. Through the #WhiteCard campaign, we urge decision-makers to turn vision into action by making sport for peace a global priority.

Investing in sport for development and peace programs is not optional—it is essential to ensuring that future generations grow up with the values and life skills needed to reject conflict and build resilience against it. We encourage the international community to join us in this call and raise a #WhiteCard for the 460 million children whose lives are disrupted by conflict.

Without sport, we risk losing one of our greatest pathways to peace.

Together, let's ensure that the potential of sport is not overlooked but fully realized. Because where there is sport, there is peace.

I am writing to inform you that we held the 5th Ambassadors for Peace Summit from December 4th to 9th of this year, and that we continue to organize conferences, inaugurate libraries, visit children, and share the joy of young people in different regions of Peru.

We are proud of our work, including the conferences, congresses, and festivals, and as we prepare for our Summit. However, we are here, strong and determined, giving our best for the peace we all need.

This event will be named after the Anthology of Maestro Fernando Salazar Wagner, the great Colombian singer and musician who dedicated more than 45 years to the service of culture and literature. Intellectuals from across Peru and other countries, including Colombia, Mexico, Argentina, Chile, Costa Rica, Ecuador, and Uruguay, will participate in Lima and Miraflores, Chinchá (Peru).

I propose children and adults as Ambassadors of Peace. These are individuals who have made a significant cultural contribution on a global scale. Sincerely, dear teacher.

Youth and Children Participate in Olive Harvest in Devastated Gaza

Despite the volatile situation, a group of young people and children from Gaza participated in the olive harvest season in mid-November 2025, alongside their families.

This is a very important season for all Palestinians, even though this year only a few olive trees remain in the Gaza Strip, mostly within the cities and in gardens, as the occupation has destroyed everything in this devastated region.

This family was overjoyed to see young people and children harvesting olives at their home, despite all the difficulties.

Ziad Medoukh confirmed that the participation of these young people and children in this harvest demonstrates their openness to civil society in the Gaza Strip, as well as their participation in various activities and events within families and society, despite the very difficult context of the tragedy experienced during the two years of the horrific aggression against the Gaza Strip.

It is with great pleasure that I write to you to share my plans for 2025 as an Ambassador for Peace.

Cardinal Carlos Aguiar, of the Primatial Archdiocese of Mexico, has appointed me for three years as advisor to the Commission for Ecumenism and Interreligious Dialogue.

In this area of dialogue, I continue to encourage, month after month, the "Virtual Visit Between Communities" with the aim of promoting mutual understanding, overcoming reluctance and mistrust, and fostering a climate of respect that can lead to shared commitments to peace.

In January, I participated in the prayer for Christian unity organized at the Pontifical University of Mexico and in the fraternal dialogue that followed among leaders of various Christian denominations.

For the month dedicated to honoring the efforts of women around the world to achieve greater justice and inclusion, we are dedicating this virtual visit to a panel of testimonies from several Latin American countries under the theme "Women: Builders of Hope, Dialogue, and Peace." Month after month,

I participate online in the Argentine initiative "Shared Readings," in which, with the help of a Jewish rabbi and a Christian theologian, we explore the sacred texts of the Old and New Testaments.

Over time, we have built a genuine interfaith community characterized by dialogue.

The active, knowledgeable, and engaged participation of young people has been wonderful.

Manuel Herranz Martin, Spain

I would be grateful if you would forward the attached proposal to the group, requesting their help and support for human unity.

If you and others could support me, we could create a WhatsApp and/or Facebook group in your city so that you can promote our initiative and allow others to join us.

We already have 15 groups on four continents, and we must continue our efforts toward unity, which is synonymous with peace.

The Proposal for Human Unity is the result of many years of reflection, study, and direct experience of intercultural coexistence. It is based on our shared knowledge, our accumulated wisdom, and the deep conviction that unity is the key to humanity and that it is possible today.

With this conviction, I assume the authority and responsibility to present, defend, and promote this proposal until its realization and/or throughout my life. I do this not as a representative of a religion, an identity, or a nation, but simply as a human being among equals.

That is why I offer my name, my face, and my total commitment.

I hope that communities around the world will reflect on the meaning of this proposal, embrace it, and follow its path.

Center for Global No killing

Human beings,

For more than two years we have been advocating, engaging with officials and individuals to have a simple tick box, a payment page, on the page of the

UNITED NATIONS PEACEBUILDING FUND

The ratio for this very important move is long-term simple:

“To see peace prevail, we need to pay more for peace than what we pay for war”.

More than just paying for the right thing at various right places, this will also alleviate the situation of all those who refuse to see their monies and taxes fund losses of lives, costs and destructions of war, war preparations and propaganda, and sometimes genocide.

The next step will be a large

“PAYING FOR PEACE CAMPAIGN”

You just started it,!

You may also want to fund APRED and the Center for Global NONKILLING who supported this voluntary work.

Every life counts and so does each resource.

May peace prevail!
